As I type, the journey is over. Zoorama: The Clones Menace story arc is finished.

For years I have discussed how I envisioned Spooo to be an anthology for both heterosexual and homosexual anthropomorphic themes. When I called for submissions, talk to friends, and just pleaded with people, all the submissions for Spooo were homosexual. While this was good, I continued my search for new materials to fill audiences of all sexual persuasions.

Meanwhile, Extro and Nexus were on a mission to get their comic published. Despite their high quality production values and savvy internet marketing, it went on a roller coaster journey with more downs than ups. At one time it was almost looking like the comic wouldn't ever be published. And now it's done.

In the end I am happy to say it's finished and fits in the Spooo idea that it's an anthology of heterosexual and homosexual theme comics.

The future – will Spooo have more heterosexual theme comics? We hope so – we are looking at the sales of Zoorama as an indication if people are interested in heterosexual comics. So your votes with money will help determine if this is to continue.

In the mean time Nexus and Extro are working on their next Zoorama. From the previews I've seen, I know you won't be disappointed when it can be exposed to the public viewing eyes.

Thanks for your support!

It's all about yote.
